PREFACE.

N compiling a bibliography one's chief anxiety is to include everything in it relating to the subject. Whether it be good, bad or indifferent does not concern the conscientious compiler, because he is only interested in making his book as complete as is possible.

The subject of bibliography appeals to a very limited section of the community and the sale of this publication will be necessarily of a limited nature, not at all commensurate with the amount of labour which has been put into it, but nevertheless it is a task well worth the doing.

The value of the literature of Bolton is considerably enhanced by being catalogued and arranged in such a way as to be of service to the individual who has a mind to use and consult it. How far the "unconsidered trifles" written by and of local men go to make up the history of the Borough will only be known and appreciated by those who are interested in the collection which is here catalogued. It is surprising from what sources the librarian obtains the local information so often asked for by readers; he never loses sight of the possibility of a demand being made, and is always anxious that the applicant should not be sent empty away. The book that stands neglected to-day is the one imperatively required to-morrow.

A bibliography brings together all the fragments of knowledge and makes them accessible to all concerned besides being a ready source of reference when a local book, manuscript, map or tract comes into the market for sale. No collection of local literature excludes anything, however apparently trifling or worthless, and when this catalogue gets into the hands of collectors it is hoped that any literature they may possess of local interest which is not included herein, will eventually find its way into the library, where it is sure of a permanent home, besides being always available for use. For a book to be locked up in a library of the private collector is for it to be practically useless, at any rate it is often there for one person's use only, whereas in the Public Library it is available to the whole community.

Hitherto, the usual method of arranging Bibliographies has been by chronological order, so that the reader may see the progress of an author's work from the commencement to the end of his career. This practice of past times may have had its advantages, but it has little application now when information is more easily procurable than formerly. Therefore, an alphabetical arrangement under author's names has been adopted for Part I., alphabetical by subject for Part II., and alphabetical by printer's names for Part III., as being most likely to meet with general approval by research workers.

It has been found necessary to alter the title of this work owing to its scope having been considerably extended. It was meant originally as a catalogue of the material contained in the Local Collection in the Reference Library, but as the work proceeded and information slowly trickled into the compiler's hands, it was decided to include everything of local interest, whether in the Library or not, thus making it "Bibliographia Boltoniensis" and not "Bibliotheca Boltoniana."

My thanks are gratefully recorded to Mr. F. W. C. PEPPER for willing help during the compilation and publication of this work.

INTRODUCTION.

HE Bibliography of Bolton is somewhat extensive, and consists principally of pamphlets, many of them on religious and semi-religious subjects. Famous as Bolton is in the world of manufacture, and prominent as it is historically for its connection with one or two national episodes, it is not unknown in the world of literature.

There are facts which deal historically with Bolton in a literary sense which cannot be passed over without mention. For instance it has a Charter, which seems to have escaped notice until it was brought to light and transcribed by Miss Mary Bateson in the pages of the English Historical Review, Vol. XVII, 1902, pp. 291, et seq., dated 14th January, 1253, and granted by William de Ferrers, Earl of Derby. Robert Halley in his "Lancashire, its Puritanism and Nonconformity," says that in the time of Henry VIII, (1509-47) "Bolton was then, in its manufacturing prosperity, rather a rival "than a dependency of Manchester. For some time it seemed doubtful which "of the two would become the great mart of the manufactures of the district." The town is also mentioned by John Leland in his "Itinerary" published in 1558, in which he says "Bolton apon Moore stondith most by Cottons "and cowrse yarne. Divers Villages in the Mores about Bolton do make "Cottons. Nother the Site nor Ground aboute Bolton is so good as it is aboute "Byri. They burne at Bolton sum Canale, but more Se Cole of the wich the "Pittes be not far of. They burne Turfe also." The cottons mentioned here were a kind of coarse woollen frieze, and must not be confused with the cotton of to-day, in the manufacture of which the climate of Bolton plays so large a part, being one of the chief factors in its success as a cotton manufacturing centre, its damp atmosphere being equal to a gain of 7 per cent. in the cost of the production of its staple industry. In 1638, Bolton was the principal market in the kingdom for the sale of fustians, most of which were manufactured in the districts around. Richard Blome in his "Britannia" written in 1673, says that "Boulton, seated on the river Irwell, a fair and well-built Town, with broad "streets; hath a market on Mondays, which is very good for cloth and "provisions; and is a place of great trade for Fustians."

In the great political struggles of the country Bolton has from very early times taken an active part. In 1513 Sir Edward Stanley, first Baron Monteagle, raised bowmen at Bolton to fight at Flodden Field. A ballad of the time ran:

"With fellows fresh and fierce in fight, Which Horton fields did turne in fores; With lusty lads liver and light, From Blaikborn and Bolton i'th Mores."

At the time of the Civil Wars Bolton was termed the "Geneva of Lancashire, and was considered the school and centre of Puritanism. In 1642 it was fortified by a thick mud wall and a wide ditch. It was twice unsuccessfully stormed by the forces of Charles I., and again by Prince Rupert and the Earl of Derby in 1644. This time the town—by the aid of treachery it is said—was taken, and a bloody massacre followed. In 1651 James, seventh Earl of Derby, was beheaded for treason in Churchgate, near the market cross.

Contemporary accounts of these events are preserved in the Reference Library in the form of tracts, which are both rare and curious. The titles of three of the more important will give some idea of their nature:—

- (1) How the Earle of Darbies forces made an onset on the Towne of Boulton and was driven off with the losse of a hundred men, and but eight on the Towne side. 1643.
- (2) An exact relation of the bloody and barbarons massacre at Bolton in the Moors, in Lancashire, May 28th, by Prince Rupert: being penned by an eye-witnesse admirably preserved by the gracions and mighty hand of God in that day of trouble. London 1644.
- (3) A particular relation of the most remarkable occurrences; from the United Forces in the North...together with a true and most credible relation of Prince Rupert's inhumane carriage at his taking of Boulton, &c. London, 1644.

Daniel Defoe also mentioned Bolton in his "Tour through Great Britain," (1738) in which he says he "saw nothing remarkable in the Town, but "noticed that the cotton manufacture had reached it; and that it did not seem "so flourishing as Manchester."

The first history of Bolton was written by John Brown in 1824; it was never completed and is now one of the rarest local works. It was published in seventeen parts and is said to be not of much account, being often inaccurate and unreliable. In 1855 we get Peter Armstrong Whittle's "History of Bolton." He was not a careful writer and many of his statements are inaccurate and unaccompanied by references supporting them.

Very little of value was written or published towards the history of Bolton until 1861, when a small "Handbook to the History and Topography of Bolton" was written by John Daly Briscoe, and a chronological record by lames Clegg, which has since become an annual publication under the title of "The Bolton Chronicle Chronological History of Bolton and District." James Clegg was also the author of "The History of the Gas Company from 1818 to 1872." A useful contribution to local history appeared in the years 1881-3 under the title of "Historical Gleanings of Bolton and District." These consist mainly of reprints from the "Bolton Chronicle" and were edited by Benjamin Thomas Barton, of Farnworth. In 1882 an important addition to local history was made by the publication of Volume 1. of Mr. William Brimelow's "Political and Parliamentary History of Bolton." This work first appeared in the "Bolton Journal" in the years 1880-4, but Volume II. was never reprinted. The two volumes bring the political history of the town down to 1871.

The History, however, had yet to be written, for although much valuable matter had been printed in pamphlet form or contributed to the local press, no attempt had been made to cover the whole ground in a comprehensive manner. This was undertaken by James Christopher Scholes, a native of Bolton, who had already published a number of pamphlets on local topics. Unfortunately he did not live to complete his task, and the work was taken up by Mr. William Pimblett, who completed and edited the whole work, and published it in 1892.

The most important local historical works of recent years are those by the late James Boardman, entitled "Records and Traditions of Deane Church Village, and Parish, from 597 to 1904," and the transcription of the "Township Booke of Halliwell," 1640 to 1762, edited by the present writer for the Chetham Society.

Humphrey Chetham, of Turton, is a Bolton worthy. The Chetham Library was probably the first free library established in England; for more than two centuries its doors have been open to all who cared to avail themselves of its privileges. Chetham founded several small church libraries; the Church at Turton contains one of these and the books may still be seen there chained to the shelves.

Though a native of Preston, Richard Arkwright is intimately connected with Bolton. He had a barber's shop in Churchgate. It was in the Parish Church that he married his first wife Patience, daughter of Robert Holt, a Bolton schoolmaster, and it is probable that on his marriage he decided at the expiration of his term of apprenticeship to migrate from Preston, and establish himself in business here. In 1761 he married a second time, and the record of this is contained in the parish register of Leigh. The entry reads "Richard Arkwright, of the parish of Bolton, barber, and Margaret Biggins, of the parish of Pennington, spinster, were married in this church by license, with consent the twenty-fourth day of March, 1761, by me Jo. Hartley, curate." The gradual disuse of wigs is assigned by some as the reason why Arkwright turned his attention to mechanical inventions, ultimately producing his "Water Frame." An interesting pamphlet is contained in the local collection, giving an account of a trial held in defence of one of his patents, with a list of Bolton subscribers to the Arkwright Defence Fund, the full title of which is:—

The trial of a cause instituted by Richard Pepper Arden, Esq....to repeal a patent granted on the sixteenth of December, 1775, to Mr. Richard Arkwright, for an invention of certain instruments and machines for preparing silk, cotton, flax, and woot for spinning, London, 1785.

The crowning invention for the manufacture of cotton yarns was the result of the long and patient toil of Samuel Crompton. His Spinning Mule undoubtedly revolutionised the cotton industry, and without this invention its development would never have reached its present magnitude. He was born in 1753, at Firwood Fold, Tong, in the Parish (now in the Borough) of Bolton. At Hall i'th' Wood, within a mile of the place of his birth, in an upper room, he toiled for five years in secret, pulling his machinery to pieces at night, and hiding the parts in different places in the house until, at length, to the astonishment of the cotton manufacturing world, his mule, in the year 1779, emerged complete. This historic house is, through the generosity of Sir W. H. Lever, Bart., now fitted up as a Public Museum. Crompton died in 1827, and is buried in the Parish Churchyard.

The earliest literature which can be said to have been written by a Bolton man, comprises some sermons printed in 1550 and following years, by the Rev. Thomas Lever, a native of Little Lever, and contemporaneously other sermons were published by the Rev. James Pilkington, Bishop of Durham, who was born at Rivington. These were followed by religious works from the pens of Lawrence Vaux, a native of Blackrod, and Lawrence Anderton, of Lostock, who wrote under the nom de plume of "John Brereley."*

The Rev. John Tilsley, M.A., Vicar of Deane, wrote a tract in 1642, entitled "A true Relation of the taking of the town of Preston," of which he was an eye-witness, having followed the victorious army under Col. Seaton to Preston. Between 1649 and 1656 Ellis Bradshaw wrote several pamphlets of more or less local interest, and other pamphlets existed about the same time. Many of these publications were printed in London, and some abroad, there being no printing press in Bolton at that time, in fact as far as I can ascertain no such press was set up in Bolton until 1785. Up to this time many sermons and articles of a controversial nature were written by Bolton men. The Revs. Oliver and Nathaniel Heywood, John Smith, a lecturer at the Parish Church, and the Rev, Zachariah Taylor were responsible for many of them; all they wrote of course have a certain value, but practically none when viewed from an historical standpoint.

^{*}There were secret printing presses set up at Lostock by the Andertons during the early part of the 17th century, which were seized by the Eishop of Chester after the death of James Anderton, which occurred 22nd September, 1613. A new press was then set up at birchley itali by a relative Roger Anderton, and this lasted for a considerable time. Roger died about 1640, but the press may have lasted some few years longer.

The Rev. John Lempriere was a master of the Bolton Grammar School, from 1790-3, and he was the author of the well known "Classical Dictionary," many editions of which have appeared, but none were printed locally. Robert Ainsworth who was educated and afterwards kept a school here compiled a "Compendious Dictionary of the Latin tongue," the first edition of which was published in 1736, and there have been many editions printed since.

The year 1785 saw the introduction of the printing press into Bolton and the publication of its first printed book, "A description of the memorable sieges "and battles in the North of England that happened during the Civil War, in "1642-3." The book contains a woodcut of the scene of the execution of the Earl of Derby, in Churchgate, in 1651, and a portrait of Oliver Cromwell which acts as a frontispiece to a life of him which is incorporated in the book. This volume was printed by John Drake, bookseller, Bolton.

About the same time a noted printer flourished in the town, named Benjamin Jackson, and among his first productions, dated 1786, are "Memorable remarks upon the ancient and modern state of the Jewish nation," and "The French Convert." It is not every town that can boast of having had a Bible printed therein, but one was printed by the executors of Jackson in 1790, and was a most ambitious specimen of printing containing many illustrations and a list of subscribers.

A volume of poetry appeared from the press of John Gardner, a Bolton printer, in 1793. It was written by James Orrell, and comprises 216 pages, and a list of 500 subscribers. It contains two poems of local interest, one "On the death of James Holland who was executed for croft-breaking * on Bolton Moor, in 1786," and the other is an epitaph on a local sexton. Curiously enough the game of football is the theme of one of the other poems.

^{*}Croft-breaking was the theft of linen, muslin &c., which after soaking in an alkaline dye was exposed in the fields to the sun and air to bleach.

Some tracts were published in 1809, which serve to place on record the famous or infamous practice associated with this town, that of "Trotting." The title of one of the tracts is "The second price, or the Bolton Swindler," being an account of the various artifices made use of by R.K., commonly "called Squire K, Lord K." A second tract is entitled "The Chronicles "of the City-le-Moors, with the downfall of the man Kayish and all his "House." These two pamphlets relate the frauds practiced by an adventurous weaver named Kay, who swindled the people of Bolton to the amount of nearly £6,000 by means of falsely representing himself to be the heir of large estates in the west of England. This swindler was made the hero of a story which ran through the "Bowtun Loominary," entitled "Th' history o' Squire Kay, th' king o' Bowtun Trotters."

In 1823 the first newspaper was published under the name of the "Bolton Reflector," and was sold at 3d. weekly. "The Bolton Chronicle," the oldest existing weekly, was first issued on the 9th of October, 1824, and in 1830 "The Bolton Literary Journal," a weekly periodical was commenced. This was an interesting and instructive paper of its kind, but ceased publication about seven months afterwards, "The Bolton Evening News" was first published in 1867, and the "Weekly Journal and Guardian" in 1871.

The first dialect writer of importance is James Taylor Staton, who was born in Bradshawgate in 1817. He established the serial known as "The Bowtun Luminary and Tum Fowt Telegraph," the comicalities of which, in the Lancashire dialect, were greatly enjoyed, not only by his fellow townsmen, but also by the inhabitants of surrounding towns. His literary efforts were so popular that his dialect sketches were much in demand both at penny readings and at the fireside. Staton has a worthy successor in Charles Allen Clarke, or, as he is more popularly known, "Teddy Ashton."

In the following pages will be found as complete a list of Local Authors and their published books and pamphlets as I have been able to make it, but although every care has been taken to verify the details of identification of authors, place and date of publication of books, &c., yet errors may have crept in. I shall be obliged if these are pointed out to me so that they may not be included in a future edition. Any further information which ought to be included in the biographical details, and which is not, will be extremely welcome, as will information about writers who appear in Part I. without any biography.

As a general rule a minimum of seven years' residence in Bolton has been fixed in qualifying an author as "local." The writings of ministers and others who made no lengthened stay in the town are not included, unless any of their books or pamphlets were printed in Bolton, when they will be found detailed in Part III, but no biographical details of the writers are given. Catalogues, reports, etc., issued by men in their official capacities are not included unless the subject matter or print is local. It has not been considered necessary to catalogue fully, for reasons of space, more than one edition of a book.

The districts covered by this work outside the Borough of Bolton are:—Ainsworth, Farnworth and Kearsley, Horwich, Little Hulton, Little Lever, Rivington, and Turton, the latter including Belmont, Birtenshaw, Bradshaw, Bromley Cross, Eagley, Edgworth, Egerton, Entwistle, Harwood, and Walmsley.

I should like to appeal to authors generally and to Lancashire authors in particular, to endeavour to secure the preservation in some permanent way of their various publications, and I know no better way of doing this than by placing them in the Public Reference Libraries of the districts in which they live. Apart from the fact that their literary efforts would be there for future reference, they would save much of the time of the bibliographer.

ABRAHAM, Ernest J. D. Born at Greenwich, 1867. In 1885 he was Superintendent of the South London Gospel Mission to Deaf Mutes, and made himself popular there as an elocutionist, besides doing journalistic work. In 1887 he became missionary to the deaf and dumb in the Bolton, Bury and Rochdale districts, which position he held till 1901, when he left Bolton to take up a position as missionary to the deaf and dumb of Melbourne, Australia. For two years he edited the "Deaf Mute World," and is the author of many pamphlets and farces.

ANDERTON, Lawrence, (1575-1643) a Jesuit priest, was the son of Thomas Anderton of Horwich. He received his rudimentary education at Blackburn Grammar School, and from thence entered Christ's College, Cambridge, where on account of his genius and eloquence he received the epithet of "silver-mouthed Anderton." He seems to have received Protestant Orders, but later became a convert to the Catholic Church. About 1604 he is said to have proceeded to Rome and entered the Society of Jesus. After spending several years teaching in continental colleges he returned to Lancashire, where his missionary labours were chiefly confined. He was Superior of the Lancashire District in 1621 and probably for some years before. About 1624 he was sent to the mission in London where he remained until 1641, and then returned to Lancashire where he died 17th

April, 1643. A secret printing press was established at Lostock Hall for the publication of Catholic literature, and many of his books issued from it. This press was seized by the Bishop of Chester upon the death of his relative James Anderton, 22nd September, 1613. A new press was then set up by James' brother Roger at Birchley Hall, and this lasted for a considerable period. Roger Anderton died in 1640, but the press possibly lasted a few years longer. Hitherto, there has been much confusion between Lawrence Anderton and his uncle James Anderton. Lawrence issued several of his works under the pseudonym of "John Brereley, Priest," and these have been ascribed to James, but Joseph Gillow, Esq., author of the "Bibliographical Dictionary of the English Catholics" (to whom I am indebted for this information) has finally settled the point by reference to original manuscripts of the author, in his possession.

- * Adelphomachia; or, Ye wars of Protestancy. 1637.
- * Campion translated.

This probably was the English translation of Campion's "Decem Rationes," of which an edition was published in 1606.

- *The converted Jew. 1630.

 Published in the name of John Clare, but according to Mr. Gillow it was not written by him.
- *The English nunne: being a treatise, wherein (by way of dialogue) the author endeavoureth to draw young and unmarried Catholike gentlewomen to imbrace a votary, and religious life; written by N. N.; hereunto is annexed a short discourse to the abbesses and religious women of all the English monasteries in the Low Countreys and France. 1642.
- * Keepe your text.
- *The life of Luther, collected from the writings of himselfe and other learned Protestants; together with a further discourse touching Melancton, Bucer, Ochine, Calvine, Beza, &c., the late pretended reformers of religion, by John Brereley, priest. 1610.

Another edition was issued at St. Omers in 1624.

- * Luther's Alcoran.
- *The lyturgie of the Masse, concerning the sacrifice, real presence, and service in Latin. [1610?]

Another edition was printed at Colen, 1620.

- * Maria Triumphans: being a discourse, wherein, by way of dialogue (between Marialdus and Mariamaßix) the B. Virgin Mary, Mother of God, is defended and vindicated from all such dishonours and indignities with which the precisions of these our days are accustomed unjustly to charge her. [Dedication signed N. N.]. 1635.
- * Miscellanea, by N. N., P. [i.e., John Brereley, Priest].
- * One God, one faith. 1625.

This was printed by Roger Anderton at the secret press at Birchley Hall.

- * The progenie of catholiks and protestants. Roven, 1632. Second edition 1634; third edition 1663.
- *The Protestant's apologie for the Roman Church; 1. Concerning the antiquity and continuance of the Roman Church since the Apostles' times; 11. The marks of the true church; 111. The loyalty of Catholics; proved by testimonies of the learned Protestants themselves. 1604.

This was probably printed at the Anderton's secret press at Lostock before the author became a Jesuit. A second edition was issued in 1608, and a translation into Latin was made by William Reyner in 1615.

- * Rawleigh, his ghost; or, A feigned apparition of Sir Walter Rawleigh; translated by A. B. 1631.
- * The reformed protestant, by John Brereley, priest. [Before 1624]. Printed at one of the secret presses at Lostock or Birchley.
- *Sainct Austines religion, collected from his owne writinges and from the confessions of the learned protestants; whereby is sufficiently proved and made knowen, the like answerable doctrine of the other more auncient fathers of the primitive church; written by John Brereley. pp. 374. 1620.
- *The triple cord; or, A treatise proving the truth of the Roman religion, by sacred scriptures, taken in the literall sense, expounded by ancient fathers, interpreted by protestant writers; with a discovery of sundry subtill sleights used by protestants, for evading the force of strongest arguments, taken from the cleerest texts of the foresaid scriptures.—If a man prevayle agaynst one, two resist him; a triple cord is hardly broken. 1634.

Reprinted in 1651.

* Virginalia; or, Spiritual sonnets in prayse of the most glorious Virgin Marie, upon everie severall title of her Litanies of Lareto; all or most part of the principall passages therein confirmed by the evident testimonies of the ancient fathers, to prevent the objections of such as usually detract from her deserved prayers, by I.B. pp. 48. Printed with license. 1632.

Only one copy of this book is known to exist.

ANDERTON, Roger, of Birchley, fourth son of Christopher Anderton of Lostock, and cousin to the above Lawrence Anderton. His name often appears in the Recusant Rolls and he again set up the secret press at Birchley which had been seized by the Bishop of Chester in 1613 at Lostock. He died in 1640. Among the Blundell of Crosby MSS. is a list of works ascribed to him by his son Christopher in 1647, but as many of these are known to have been written by other authors, it is probable that most of the works in the list were only printed by him. The following titles are taken from this list, those known to be by other authors being omitted.

- * An antidote against Purgatorie.
- * Bellarmine's Controversies.

These were translated into English by Roger Anderton, and sent by him to the Rev. Henry Heaton at St. Omer, but were never printed.

* Bellarmin of the lamentation of ye dove, translated.

This may be "The Mourning of the Dove," written in Latin by Cardinal Bellarmine, and translated by William A. Batt, published in 1641.

- * Bellarmin of ye Words of Our Lord.
- * The Christian manna.
- * Clavis Homerica.
- * Puritanisme the mother, Sinn the daughter; or, A treatise wherein is demonstrated that the fayth of the Puritans doth forcibly induce its professours to the perpetrating of sinne; hereunto is added (as an appendix) a funeral discourse touching the deathes of Dr. Price, Deane of Hereford, and Dr. Butts, Vice-Chancellor of Cambridge, by B. C. 1633.

ANDREWS, Rev. Robert, (1723-1766?) born at Bolton 29th June, 1723. Educated at Kendal. Minister of Platt Chapel, Manchester 1752, and about three years later went to Bridgnorth, where he remained until mental derangement compelled him to relinquish his duties.

- * Animadversions on Dr. Brown's Essays on the Characteristics.
- * Criticism on the sermons of the Rev. John Holland.
- * Eidyllia: a poem. Edinburgh, 1757.
- *Odes, dedicated to the Hon. Charles Yorke, Esq. Birmingham, 1766.
- * translator. The works of Virgil; Englished by Robert Andrews. pp. IV. + 16 + 536. Birmingham: John Baskerville, 1766.

APPOLLONIUS RHODIUS, pseud. See McKnight, John.

ARROWSMITH, Peter Rothwell, J.P., (1815-1890) Cotton spinner. Born in Bolton; entered Town Council November 1840, and sat intermittently till April 1865; appointed a J.P. December 1855; Mayor for two years, 1853-5; helped to establish the Bolton Public Library and was identified in various municipal activities. Died at Dalston, near Carlisle, 24th August, 1890 aged 75 years.

ASHTON, Teddy, pseud. See Clarke, Charles Allen.

ASHWORTH, Henry, (1794-1880) was born at Turton, near Bolton, on 4th September, 1794, and was educated at the Quakers' School in Ackworth (W.R. Yorkshire). Leaving school he, with his brother Edmund, managed the extensive mills bearing their name at Turton. The two brothers established schools, a reading room and library in the village, and did much for the well-being of their employees. Henry Ashworth was a founder of the Anti-Corn Law League, and was a warm friend of John Bright. These two men were strenuous in their efforts to obtain the repeal of the Corn Laws and in 1846 their zeal was rewarded with success. He was the first Quaker magistrate in England, and died in Florence on 17th May, 1880 aged 86, and was buried there.

FAWCETT, John, senior, (1789-1867) was born at Wennington, near Lancaster, 8th December, 1789. He early showed musical tendencies, and at the age of fifteen wrote hymn tunes, and two years later became a choir master. He was next a clarionet player and the master of a local militia band, for which he composed much music. In 1810 he published a collection of his hymn tunes, and three years later an additional set of hymn tunes with other pieces. Roger Holland, of Birch House, Farnworth, engaged him in connection with the Wesleyan Sunday School at Halshaw Moor, and there Fawcett took up his residence and followed the occupation of a shoemaker. Removing to Bolton in October, 1825, his musical activities included at different times the leadership of the choirs at the Wesleyan Chapel, Bridge Street, and the Independent Chapel, Mawdsley Street. His compositions are supposed to number over two thousand. He lived in Bolton till his death on 26th October, 1867. A monument, subscribed for by the public, was placed on his grave at Tonge Cemetery.

ROTHWELL, Selim, (1815-1881) was born at Bolton, and educated at the Grammar School. He was afterwards trained in his father's business as a painter and decorator, and learned drawing at the Mechanics' Institution. Attaining great proficiency in drawing he commenced classes of his own, and about 1852 removed to Manchester. There he continued in his profession, becoming a member of the Manchester Academy of Fine Arts, of which he was secretary for about 20 years. He was a well known artist, exhibiting at the Royal Academy and other chief exhibitions, and made numerous sketching tours on the continent. He died, 10th August, 1881, after making preparations for the Fine Art Exhibition at the Bolton Infirmary, of which project he was the founder and organizing secretary.

STATON, James Taylor, (1817-1875) was born at Bradshawgate, Bolton, 16th January, 1817. Left an orphan at an early age he was educated at Chetham's College, Manchester, where he acted in the capacity of servant to the governor. On leaving school he was apprenticed to Robert M. Holden, printer, of Bolton, and afterwards started business for himself. In the year 1861-2 he served as a guardian for Great Bolton, but in 1863 removed to Manchester where he edited for John Heywood The Lankishire Loominary. He returned to Bolton in 1867 and entered the service of his former fellow apprentice, John Tillotson, who meanwhile had succeeded to Robert M. Holden's business. From that office proceeded the Bolton Evening News, and until 1871 Staton was connected with it as sub-editor and overseer. After a short engagement as editor of the Farnworth Observer, he returned to the employment of John Heywood at Manchester, where he remained until his death, 26th May, 1875. He was buried at Tonge Cemetery, Bolton.

TILSLEY, Rev. John, M.A., (1614-1684) was born in Lancashire, probably near Bolton, and educated at Edinburgh University, where he graduated M.A. in 1637. He became Curate of Deane in February, 1641, and was appointed Vicar in 1643. He was one of the most prominent ministers in Lancashire during the Civil War, and accompanied Sir John Seaton's forces when they took Preston on 9th February, 1642-3, and in 1646 took a leading part in a petition to Parliament to establish an ecclesiastical government in Lancashire. He was ejected from Deane in 1650 for refusing to take the "engagement" (i.e. fidelity to Cromwell's Government). He eventually renewed his duties, but was again ejected by the Act of Uniformity in 1662. He was allowed to reside in the house accompanying the church, and preached occasionally in neighbouring churches. He was finally silenced in 1678, and spent the rest of his life in retirement at Manchester, where he died 12th December, 1684.
